It's Homework Time Again in Wyandotte

With the start of another school year comes the start of another round of homework assignment...

has been educating its members at fun and informative Sharpen Your Brain workshops offering simple exercises to stimulate brain growth. The workshops are run by a team from the Institute of Gerontology at Wayne State University (WSU), Donna MacDonald, the institute's director of outreach and educational programs, and Cheryl Deep, who directs media relations and communications. They developed their popular brain training workshops, also known as Brain Neurobics in conjunction with WSU and other cognitive neuroscience researchers. They have helped more than 5,000 older adults in metro Detroit tune up their brains. Hundreds of HAP members have benefited from attending the popular workshops. Now HAP, MacDonald and Deep are sharing some of their top tricks so all residents in southeast Michigan can tune up their brains!

1. Shake up your world.

Strain your brain to re-train your brain! Just like building muscle, you need to give the brain a little workout to build and strengthen memory. Force your brain to pay attention with daily surprises like wearing your watch on the other wrist, or eating dinner with your non-dominant hand. These small stimulations help to build new connections in the brain's memory center. Move a wastebasket to the opposite corner of a room. Write your name backwards, so it looks correct in a mirror. The brain loves novelty! Puzzles and brain games help, too. Try games you aren't particularly good at for an added challenge.

2. Sleep like a baby. We think about 70,000 thoughts every day. Sustained, deep sleep allows us to sort and organize all those thoughts and experiences. Without quality sleep, thoughts collect in a chaotic pile, like returned library books. If they aren't re-stocked on the right shelves, we'll never find them again. Aim for seven to eight hours of sleep each night with four hours of uninterrupted, deep sleep.

3. Move that body. The brain may be small in size but uses 20 percent of all the oxygen we breathe! Brain cells need oxygen to survive and thrive. Keep your arteries flowing freely by eating healthy, lower in fat and higher in fruits and vegetables, and be sure to get 30 minutes of aerobic exercise most days of the week. Aerobic means you're breathing more heavily and your heart is beating a little faster. Your doctor can tell you what's safe, but most folks are fine with a brisk walk. What's good for the body is great for the brain.

4. You've got to have friends. Socializing is one of the most stimulating activities our brain performs. Think of the many layers of study and understanding needed in even a simple get-together. Names, faces, body language, tone of voice, listening, talking, movement – this challenges the brain and encourages it to grow. Living socially also boosts our mood to protect us from depression which can hamper memory and brain function.

5. Floss. That's right. Flossing once a day and brushing twice a day protects against gum swelling that can raise the risk of dementia. A research study of over 1,000 folks in their 70s showed that gum swelling was the cause most strongly related with mental decline. Poor mouth health can cause heart disease, too, so floss like your life (and your brain) depends on it.
